

FlexMetrix™

FlexMetrix™, a scientifically developed program based on empirical research, is designed to capture critical feedback from employees regarding the usage and value of work flexibility. The program is developed to help organizations better track the use and effectiveness of flexible work practices. FlexMetrix assists organizations in implementing and managing work-life programs for their employee base at the work group, business and corporate levels.

Featuring an ROI calculator to quantify the value of the company's investment in flexibility, FlexMetrix™ also determines logical next steps for the organization based on the results. Whether organizations are just beginning to implement flexible work programs or are well into their implementation, FlexMetrix™ provides key data necessary for making strategic business decisions that impact the recruitment, retention, engagement and productivity of critical talent throughout the career life course.

Click here to read the FlexMetrix™ press release.